ASOUT BLECTRICITY.

Paure's success in constructing an apparatus for the storage of electricity prom. less to lead to a complete revolution in the application of motive power. It has been fecognized as a fact that the storage of electricity was possible, and in a small and temporary way the problem was solved many years ago. But the practical application of the principal did not come about until little more than a year ago. The forded by the recent experiment in several boxes charged with electricity placed on board the ocean steamer Labrador, the result of which, well known, was satisfactory beyond anticipation. Nothing could be simpler than the construction of the apparatus. A sheet of lead, perforated with small holes, is coafed with red lead on both sides, and against each face is laid a sheet of parchment. The plate is then sewed in a cloth jacket, one corner being left bare for the purpose of connecting the plates to establish a metallic circuit. Fourteen of these plates are inclosed in a wooden case, they are arranged in voltaic piles, and the positive and negative poles by a metal strip connection with the box. The plates are covered with acidated water, and the apparstus is ready for use. The interesting feature of this bottled force is its general utility, the possibility of applying it to any movable machine as a motor. It promises to solve the problem of rapid transit in cities along street car-ways, as it can be attached to vans and operated at a comparatively trifling cost. In railway travel any desired speed can be obtained, as it will be possible to propel a locomotive at the rate of 200 miles an hour. The introduction of this perfected principle will be of the greatest importance to the business interests of this and other countries. and its application does not seem to be very remote. - Inter-Ocean.

TOLD IN HIS OWN WAY.

A colored man named Bob Tompkins was on trial last week before an Austin justice for assault. Old Uncle Mose was one of the leading witnesses for the State. The main point was whether or not Tompkins had given any provocation to bring on "Now, just tell this jury all you know

----THE BRIDEGROOM'S " BEST MAN."

The custom of a bridegroom being attended on his marriage by a friend or relative, who is styled his "best man," as practiced at weddings in the present day, is of great antiquity, descending from our Saxon ancestors. In their time, marriages were always celebrated in the house of the bridegroom. On the day before the wedding, all his friends and relations having been in vited, arrived at his house, and spent the time in feasting and in preparing for the approaching ceremony. Next came the bridegroom's company, mounted on horseback, completely armed, who proceeded in great state and order, under the command of one who is called the forwistaman, or foremost man, to receive and conduct the bride in safety to the house of her future husband. The bride, in her turn, was at tended by her guardian and other male relafives, led by a matron, who was called the brideswoman, and followed by a company of young maidens, who were called bridesmaids. The Saxon forwistaman of the ninth century is the phototype of the English "best man" of the mineteenth.

"In the first place," he said, "do you know what hair is anyway ?"

"Only in a general way, perhaps. "Then let me tell you in a word. It is an elongated spidermic appendage. Its es sential structure consists of an assemblage of epidermic cells, at the bottom of a flask shaped follicle in the substance of the skin, supplied with blood by vessels distributed to its walls."
